

China Gets a New Terror: Famine

Reliable Hong Kong reports indicated North-east China was in the grip of one of its worst famines in decades. Millions faced starvation in an area where more than a third of China's 450 million live (map, r.). The famine was spreading south and west.

Background: Victims blamed both Nationalists and Communists for the famine. Causes: conscription of troops, requisitioning of food by both armies, summer drought, fall floods. Next danger: a Red campaign to cut rice supplies to British Hong Kong, now swollen with refugees, and to Malaya, already plagued by revolts.

CHINA'S FAMINE AREA (IN RED)

Quick

March 13, 1950

p. 3

OldMagazineArticles.com