BOB AND RAY: KIDDERS AT LARGE

Two young fugitives from a Boston radio station, Bob Elliott and Ray Goulding (back cover) were proving that radio—and some 15 million listeners—could take anything. In exchange for lampooning radio's most sacred cows—soap operas and commercials — Bob and Ray now had four separate radio shows (two on NBC's network; two on NBC's New York station), were on the air five days a week.

Cheerfully Refunded

Sandwiched between platter-spinning and such satires as Mary Backstage, Noble Wife, are the Bob and Ray gag commercials. ("Just write to NBC and your letter will be cheerfully refunded.") These have included: the Kind Hunter's Kit (for soft-hearted people who love to hunt but hate to kill—contains bullets that drop to the ground and are packed with animal vitamins); Limpo Mickeys (to make the over-active child sluggish, dull and compliant); the Home Surgery Kit; a 10-day course on how to become a 97-pound weakling; 300 pounds of sliced onions.

The Smithsonian Institute complained after getting 1,000 requests for the Handy Bob and Ray Home Wrecking Kit.

Dilemma: now that Bob and Ray have real sponsors, they're having difficulty persuading listeners to take some of the commercials without the usual grain of salt.
