

Armored Force School Men are given their "land legs" by learning to sight and fire guns while standing on "wobble plates" which simulate the jiggle of a tank in motion

TANK GUNNERS. Men in the Gunnery Dept. at Ft. Knox, Ky., practice marksmanship with an electric-eye gun before going out on the range. The U.S. now has seven armored divisions

The Gunnery Dept. practices economy in target shooting by loading 37~m.m. shells ($4.35) with .22~cal. cartridges (less than a cent each)
