Want to "Father" Large Families

GENEVA, March —Many of the French papers arriving here lately contain advertisements like the following: "Frenchman, under 40, healthy and handsome, desires to marry a widow or divorcee with not less than six children."

These strange matrimonial "ads" are explained by the fact that under the French law the fathers or stepfathers of six or more children are not only exempt from military duty, but also receive premiums from the Government to enable them to raise their large families.
