

Korea: Will the Reds Try Again?

Chinese Reds, their offensive crushed by U.N. air- and fire-power, surrendered by the thousands to advancing UN troops. UN officers expected the Reds to build up slowly for one more big drive in Korea.

Background: Air reconnaissance has shown the Reds building up tank assembly areas, lengthening airfield runways in North Korea. U.N. military officials believed the heavy losses of men in two Red drives this Spring had convinced the Communists they would have to use their scanty airpower in any new offensive.

Quick

June 4, 1951

p. 6

A 155 mm. gun blasts in Korea.

OldMagazineArticles.com