

Double-Deck Armed Flying
Machine of English Forces

100-hp. Gnome engine and normal speed.

Another craft of the British is a biplane built high to accommodate a gunner in a carriage beneath the upper plane, immediately under the engine. His rifle is so mounted that he can aim it back over his lap when sighting on the ground ahead or toward the earth behind him. It is arranged so that it may be turned in any direction, point of the compass.

OldMe