

THE
B. E. F. TIMES.

WITH WHICH ARE INCORPORATED
The Wipers Times, The "New Church" Times,
The Kemmel Times & The Somme-Times.

Monday, March 5th, 1917.

A "B.-E.-F."
ALPHABET.

A is the ARMY, in which he's a veteran Who's fought for a year from the Somme up to Meteren, Finding in Winter each week is a wetter
'un
And passing his days in the trenches.

B for old BLIGHTY, where, so we hear,
Prices are rising, and food is so dear
That a 'sub' can't afford to even go near:
It is cheaper to stay in the trenches.

C for the CAVALRY who, (so I've heard say)
Have not seen their gee-gees for many a day,
But soon they will mount them and gallop away,
And we'll all say good-bye to the trenches.

D for the DUCKBOARDS—if placed end to end They'd girdle the Earth, and to Heaven ascend,
But I notice they've caused a peculiar blend
Of language to thrive in the trenches.

E for the EDITOR, ruddy in hue, He'd blue-pencil this if I said all I knew,
So I'll wish him good luck or—between me and you—
He'll send me exploring Hun trenches.

"B.-E.-F." ALPHABET.

N for the NOMINAL ROLLS we send through Daily and weekly and monthly to 'Q' :
 But we'd do it gladly and much worse things too,
 To finish the war in the trenches,

O the OBSERVER, who sees many sights,
 Such as stout German generals dancing in tights,
 And performing the most inexplicable
 rites,
 From his O-Pip in one of our trenches.

P'S for PEDICULI, horrible pests, They make themselves happy in trousers and vests ; Though dear little fellows, they're unwelcome guests
 To the P.B.I. in the trenches.

Q ? Well its obvious who fills this place—
 Princes of paper, the pride of our race—Every movement and minute be sure they can trace
 And send back to the man in the trenches.

R the RETURNS to be rendered by noon
 Of the number of men who have seen a blue moon,
 Speak Japanese, or have been to Rangoon,
 Before they came out to the trenches.

S for the SAPPERS, who sin without shame,
 And in spite of all efforts will go down to fame
 As the men who invented the five-bob
 "A" frame,
 To keep up the sides of our trenches.

T for the TRENCHES themselves (this is where I must take heed what I write, or I'll swear !)
 Which have blackened our souls, and have whitened our hair : Oh ! Life is a dream in the trenches.

U for the UNIVERSE, whose fate 'tis plain
 Is now being settled in mud, slush and rain,
 By strafing which spreads from Nieuport to Lorraine,
 A line which is marked by our trenches.

"B.-E.-F." ALPHABET.

V for the VICES soldiers posses, Discovered by those who have been more or less Claimants to fame through a line in the Press,
 But never have shone in the trenches.

W for WHISKEY and WHIZZ-BANGS as well :
 Of the former I've almost forgotten the smell,
 Whilst the latter contribute to make it like Hell
 At various times in the trenches.

X for the unknown—and 'twixt you and me
 Fritz is now thinking (and we all agree) That, hot as his present, his future will be Much hotter than e'er in the trenches.

Y for the YARNS that one hears—some are true :
 Others—Well ! doubtless, though vivid in hue,
 Are spun by those 'back,' who have never been through,
 Or stood their whack of the trenches.

Z is for ZERO, the time we go over,
 Most of us wish we were way back in Dover,
 Making munitions and living in clover
 And far, far away from the trenches.
